The electronic compass (B26) determines the current route of the vehicle using the earth's magnetic field and passes the appropriate data to the trip computer control module (N41) via a two-wire interface (RS485).

The compass has a calibration mode to allow the route to be determined as accurately as possible. In this mode the compass can be adapted to the magnetic conditions around the vehicle.

Copyright DaimlerChrysler AG 18.05.2006 CD-Ausgabe G/10/04 . This WIS print-out will not be recorded by Modification services.